

3 COMMON MYTHS ABOUT WILLS – AND WHY YOU SHOULDN'T BELIEVE THEM

Planning for the future can feel overwhelming, but creating a will is one of the most important steps to protecting your loved ones. Despite this, over half of Canadians don't have a will—often because of common misconceptions. Let's break down three of the biggest myths about estate planning.

Myth #1: "I'm Too Young to Need a Will"

Many people think wills are only for seniors, but the truth is, anyone over 18 can benefit from having a will—especially if you have assets, children, or specific wishes for your estate. Life is unpredictable, and having a plan in place ensures your loved ones are taken care of.

Myth #2: "Making a Will Is Expensive and Complicated"

Traditionally, creating a will required visiting a lawyer, which can be costly and time-consuming. But thanks to online platforms like Willful, you can create a legally binding will in 20 minutes or less, from the comfort of home—at a fraction of the cost of traditional estate planning.

Myth #3: "I Don't Own Enough to Need a Will"

Even if you don't own property or have significant assets, a will is about more than just money. It ensures your wishes are followed, from who takes care of your children and pets to how your personal belongings are distributed. A will provides peace of mind, no matter the size of your estate.
